

“Hard machine learning problems and potential solutions”

George Cybenko

Deep learning has made impressive progress in many relevant problems such as object recognition, image and video captioning and so on. However, there are important problems for which no known machine learning solutions exist including advanced behavior modeling and data fission. This talk will briefly review some of those problems and their potential solutions.